MARCELA SURPRISE IN SIXTH

Wickens' Mount Wins at Odds of 12 to 1—Kleinwood Is the Best in the Last Race—Austin Pilots Two Winners—Summaries at New Orleans and the Other Tracks.

New Orleans, Dec. 22.—This was the closing day of the first fortnight of racing given by the City Park Jockey Club, and everything, too, seemed to favor the final day's sport. Bright, sunny, and cool weather and a good card of seven races brought out a large crowd to witness the running of the Cypress Handicap, which was the feature event. The race had an added value of $1,500, but only four went to the post, with James Reddick, Ellison's good three-year-old, having the honor of being favorite. The Ellison horse ruled around even money at all stages, while most of the other players centered about Goldie, who was dropped in at 36 pounds. In view of Goldie's poor race the other day, when he was beaten off by an ordinary lot of selling-players, the layers took much liberty with him at the start. However, the real live money, as it is dubbed by the layers, came into the ring, and when the bugle sounded the Corriean colt was a 3 to 2 chance.

The running of the race showed very plainly that something must have happened to Goldie in his previous race. The colt was hustled to the front by Garner, who had the mount, and he was never in the rear. James Reddick made his usual game honest bid to the stretch, but the weight told, and he finished second, while Shawana dropped into third place.

GUARDS THE TRYOUTS

John E. Madden Framing Coups for Two-year-olds.

SECRET WORK OF HIS STRING

Famous Hamburg Trial in 1897 in the Moonlight—Public Thrown Off by Faking a "Cool Out" on Burlesque—Salvidere Will Exercise at Clinton Park, Little Rock.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 22.—John E. Madden is preparing for a feast of good things which he hopes will be launched on unsuspecting bookmakers next season. This information has leaked out through the visits of horsemen to Clinton Park, Little Rock, where an even score of aristocratic sons and daughters of Mr. Madden's best Kentucky sires and matrons are being broken for the preliminary trials for 1907 racing.

Special care is being taken by Charles T. Patterson, who has charge of Madden's interests, to protect Madden's secrets and no one has been able to discover the identity of any juvenile colt or filly. Patterson admits to all that he has received instructions not to disclose the breeding or any information whatever of any member of his household.

Madden has leased the entire race track for his own use and for his friends who might care to train there. Charles Patterson has taken up his residence in the clubhouse, where the flower and chivalry of Little Rock once assembled when attending the races under the old Arkansas Jockey Club during the times when horsemen, Lookout, Calhoun, and others were attracted to the track, and an effort will be made to prep the youngsters in a manner so that the railbirds and "clockers" will be puzzled when the Madden colts are sent to the post.

Hamburg Coup a Dais.
Horsemen remembering past successes hereabouts of Madden and Patterson say that it was his great coup with the mighty Hamburg that prompted him to send his baby brigade back to Clinton Park, rather than attempt to train them in Kentucky. Before the "master of Hamburg" achieved such renown he resorted to the most mysterious methods in preparing his horses. In the year 1897 that Hamburg was given his famous moonlight trial in which he stepped up the famous filly in faster time than a two-year-old had ever stepped before. The great colt was started by the flash of a lantern from the half-mile pole and the timer, who was stationed at the finish, caught the time at the judges' stand in something less than 62 seconds, while the record time for that race was 64 seconds.

Horsemen heard of a "moonlight trial" having taken place, and when they began to inquire around the Madden-Patterson stable they saw the three-year-old colt Burlesque being "cooled out." The wet blanket from Hamburg, however, had been transferred, and a double coup was thereby accomplished, as subsequent events have shown.

John E. Madden, who was then a boy, was Schorr from shipping his then good horse Macy to Little Rock for the Derby, while a few months later Hamburg was moved at Grady's stable and sold to Madden and Patterson's winnings were estimated in the thousands.

Salvidere at Clinton Park.
At Clinton Park Salvidere, the crack two-year-old, will receive his first gallop as a three-year-old. He will celebrate his birthday on January 1—the national birthday of the thoroughbred—and from then on until the string is shipped to Lexington the turf will watch for developments from Madden's mysterious little band of horses.

Many horsemen here remembering the failure that followed the efforts of the local turfmen, John E. Schorr, to give private clockers of information concerning horses that have never started, express opinion that the same results will follow Madden when he reaches Eastern tracks. Schorr, however, has been out of the spring of 1900, and each colt was known as No. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. When they reached the races all everything that was in the colors was made a short-primed clock.

Trainer "Bub" May, for one, does not believe in the mysterious system, and furthermore, says that the dreaded clockers have never been able to get a good bet that he had made up his mind to cash. One exception was on Prospero in 1905. The Mays and a following attempted a coup, but the clockers caught the private time Prospero made and short price was accepted about the colt. May developed Highball, Pulsus, and others, and won many races, including the American Derby with Highball.

MAHER ON RACE HORSES.
Thinks English Are from 14 to 21 Pounds Better Than American.

In the latest issue of the Tatler to hand from across the water Danny Maher, the American jockey, compares the American and English race horses and says that the English are from 14 to 21 pounds better than the American horses. Maher says: "There was a time many years ago when I was under the impression that the racing in America was the finest in the world. Since, however, I have been residing in England I have quite changed my views on this subject, and, indeed, when I say that without a shadow of doubt, both English race horses and race jockeys are absolutely better than I am on safe ground."

"Still, absurd though it seems, I have met a big bunch of racegoers who hold the opinion that the English are behind the racing in America. They say that the English are from 14 to 21 pounds better than the American horses. PLAYERS COME BACK.

Twelve Former Big Leaguers Return to Fast Company.

What kind of "dope" do they give the big league discards in the American Association? How is it that an outfielder to whom the "23" sign has been handed by some American or National League manager is able to bob up in fast company after a year or two in the strongest of Class A organizations? The American League outer gardeners have had a dozen such "come backs" during the last year or so, and the chances are that the next few seasons will witness more such reversals of form on the part of those who have been recently let out.

To start with, there was Jimmy Jackson, Jimmy was not good enough for Philadelphia, and drifted into the St. Paul team, where he played championship ball; good enough, in fact, to secure him a two years' trial with Cleveland. Congalton was turned back by Chicago, and has since bobbed up as one of the best clouters in the strongest organization in baseball to-day, while Cleveland's latest pitching recruit, Hinchman, was released by Cincinnati prior to his playing such good ball with Columbus.

Jimmy McAleer has no less than four outfielders who were sent back to the minors after receding trials in the American League, and he has since bobbed up in the St. Paul team, where he played championship ball; good enough, in fact, to secure him a two years' trial with Cleveland.
